

The work of statisticians depends heavily on the use of technology in handling the plethora of

In maximizing current resources, schools and school systems should inventory the various technologies they have available. A pitfall that occurs in education, especially in the secondary schools, is that the different disciplines become more departmentalized with less connections occurring across the

Appendix B

